Budgie

Budgies are brightly coloured birds that come from Australia. They should be kept in a wire cage but allowed to fly around each day to get some exercise. Budgies also like to have lots of toys in their cage, especially if it is on its own. A budgie eats bird seed, but also like some fresh fruits and vegetables as a treat. They also need fresh drinking water every day. A budgie can be trained to sit on a finger and can enjoy being stroked.

Goldfish
Goldfish can be kept by themselves or with other gold fish. It is important to put them in a tank large enough for them to swim around. Goldfish food can be bought from pet shops. They need feeding daily but should not be overfed as this can harm them. The water in their tank will need changing once a week. Toys, which have places for them to hide, can be placed at the bottom of their tank.

Gerbil

In the wild gerbils live in the desert, so they like to dig tunnels. They need to be placed in a gerbil cage or a glass aquarium and be given lots of nesting material, such as shredded paper or wood shavings. When feeding gerbils they need to be given something they can gnaw on as their front teeth grow continuously. Gerbils like to play and should be given cardboard tubes to run through and to chew on. They are most active at night-time.

Hamster

Hamsters can be quite tame and do not bite people when being held. They like to have lots of exercise and can be placed in an exercise ball so they can run around the floor. Hamsters should not be given any green vegetables because they store food around their cage and this could rot. They like to be kept by themselves or with one other hamster.
