Wolves

A wolf is a type of wild dog which lives in groups, known as packs. In the pack there can be between two to twenty wolves.

A baby wolf is called a cub. Each mother will have four to six cubs. They live for six to eight years in the wild, but can live up to sixteen years in zoos.

Wolves hunt for birds, fish, moose, deer and other mammals. They are carnivores, which means their main food is meat.

They can be found in North America, Europe and Russia.

Now answer the following questions. Write in full sentences.

1. What do we call a baby wolf?

2. How many wolves can live in a pack?

3. Name three things wolves eat.

4. For how many years can a wolf expect to live?
Answers

1. What do we call a baby wolf?

   A baby wolf is called a cub.

2. How many wolves can live in a pack?

   A pack can be between two to twenty wolves.

3. Name three things wolves eat.

   Accept any three of the following answers: Wolves eat birds, fish, moose, deer and other mammals.

4. For how many years can a wolf expect to live?

   Wolves live for six to eight years in the wild, but can live up to sixteen years in zoos.